Seven powerful products to fight razor burn, aging and deep-down dirt

Hermès Terre d'Hermès Parfum

We like to think of this as the ultimate hot-guy scent thanks to its warm woody notes, deeply masculine patchouli and vetiver, and exciting little zingers like grapefruit, peppers and mint—all housed in a sleek, limited-edition bottle designed by Irish artist Nigel Peake.

Level Naturals Tea Tree + Activated Charcoal Soap

This clean-smelling bar is built to detox. Purifying charcoal pries out grime, and the oil-packed ingredient list (coconut, sunflower, olive, we could go on) means it's also deeply moisturizing. Oh, and that tea tree oil? It fights breakouts and B.O.

Art of Shaving Unscented Shaving Cream

What it doesn't have: a frothy smell or drying alcohol. What it does have: a rich combination of highly moisturizing glycerin and coconut acid.

Perricone MD Pre:Empt Series Refreshing Shower Mask

Step in shower. Smooth on skin. And enjoy the tingy feel of this gel mask as it protects skin from hot water (sorry, dude, it's drying), fights aging with antioxidants and hydrates with squalene and jojoba.

Gillette Fusion ProShield Chill Razor

Talk about smooth moves. This razor boasts the brand's thinnest blades yet, its head pivots to follow the contours of your face, and it's loaded up with two bands of skin lubricants—one before and one after the blade. Bonus points for the fact that it soothes skin with its cooling effect.

Kiehl's Nourishing Beard Grooming Oil

Even a groomed beard can get itchy. This oil combines exfoliating salicylic acid and pracaxi oil (from the South American pracaxi tree) to not only hydrate and tame each hair, but heal the skin beneath.

Acqua di Parma Colonia Club After Shave Lotion

Yes, if you want to play dermatologist for a second, it strengthens the skin's outer protective layer, and yes, it also comes in balm form for dry complexions. But it's worth using just for the scent: citrus and lavender, sexed up with vetiver and musk.
